

A Woman's Antiquarian.
Mrs. Haynes, wife of Prof. John B. Haynes, Ph. D., of the University of Pennsylvania, went with her husband in 1898 to Asiatic Turkey, where they spent fifteen months in making excavations on the site of Calveh, the oldest city known to man. She was the only white woman whom the people of her locality had ever seen. They regarded her at first with awe, but subsequently became devoted to her protection and comfort.

A Great Surrender.
The greatest surrender in the annals of warfare was that of Metz, on October 27, 1870. As a fortified place, Metz, with its surrounding fortifications, was practically impregnable, but had generalship permitted it to be completely surrounded and cut off. The surrender included three field marshals, sixty-six generals, 6,000 officers of lower degree over 400 guns, 100 metralleuses, nearly sixty standards and 173,000 rank and file.

Swiss Teachers Well Treated.

The public schools of Switzerland are operated by the government, and civil service rules are strictly applied. The teachers, who are mostly women, are very well paid and never discharged except for cause. When they get so old they can't teach any more they are pensioned liberally. The result is that the country has an excellent corps of educators in the schools.

IDEAS FOR THE HOSTESS.

Berry Party an Amusing and Seasonable Entertainment.

This entertainment is peculiarly suited for this season of the year, when there are so many beautiful berries obtainable. Decorate with holly, and any of the scarlet berries to be found in the northern and southern woods. The mountain ash berries are most decorative and the delicate "squaw berry" wine, if it is to be had in sufficient quantity. Plates outlined with it or a spray around the sherbet glasses is most attractive. Provide plenty of cranberries, and when the guests arrive, pass each two bits of ribbon a quarter of a yard in length, have two sets of these ribbons the same color, one for the ladies and one for the men. In this way partners are found, then have a bowl of berries for each couple, the man to string a berry necklace and the girl a watch chain; the ends to be tied with the ribbons.

Then pass cards ornamented with hand painted berry sprays bearing the following questions, all to be answered by the name of a berry:
What berry is a favorite flavoring? Wintergreen berry.
What berry is red when it's green? Blackberry.
What berry is much used for a fabric much loved by ladies? Mulberry.
What berry was made famous by Mark Twain? Huckleberry.
What berry is found on the grass? Dew-berry.
What is the most irritating berry? Raspberry.
What berry is used in stables? Strawberry.
What is the berry always in evidence at a great winter festival? Holly.
What is the oldest of all berries? Elderberry.
The berry that always comes with the king of birds? Cranberry.
The most melancholy berry? Blueberry.
An indentation on the coast? Bay-berry.
A berry often used in a favorite game? Chequerberry.
A help in making things clean? Soapberry.
A berry nearly always found with the arbutus? Squaw berry.
What berry is a dunce? Gooseberry.

For a prize a strawberry-shaped emery may be given to the lady and a berry pie to the man; if more elaborate souvenirs are desired there are berry dishes, plates with berry designs, etc.
Cranberry sherbet may be served instead of ice cream. It is delicious.

HER DEADLY RIVAL

(The tall man in the leather arm-chair leans forward, hands hanging between his knees, head tilted back so far that his gray-brown beard projects horizontally from his chin. The girl in the corner of the day-port reaches for a pillow, pounds it with her morsel of a flat and adds it to those already tucked behind her back before she speaks.)

"Oscar Keith," Seymour. I was the one that had a rival. You needn't tip your head back and look through your glasses that way!

"Well, then, I met him last spring, and I was attracted right away, because he was big and strong and all that. We weren't engaged though, until June, and after that everything was lovely until the cool days came, this fall.

"Cool days! That isn't so bad. But wouldn't you be cool yourself if you got note after note saying, 'Can't take that walk this aft. It's too good a day to practice.' Or, 'I'm sending you both the season tickets for that lecture course. Better get some girl to go with you. I might have known, when I bought them, that I couldn't waste October afternoons at lectures, but, you see, I never was engaged before and I suppose it went to my head."

"It was football, you see, Uncle, and a man might as well be a Mormon as try to be true to football and a girl at the same time. Days would pass without his coming near me, and when he did come he couldn't talk about a thing but tackles and bucking the line. 'At first I didn't show that I felt hurt. Instead, I got up a little evening supper—the kind he always liked. Do you suppose he ate it? He looked reproachful, as if I ought to have known without being told that he lived on birdseed and mush in football season—and he never touched a crumb! Then he followed that by telling me that he'd have to go to bed at six every night after this and get up and take long runs in the early morning. But he said Oscar Keith had agreed to be his 'sub' in taking me to the theater the next evening—an engagement we'd had for two weeks—and he seemed to think I ought to be very grateful for his kindness in arranging that."

"Well, Oscar Keith! You know him? A Ph. D.—never played football in his life—but he was an attentive escort and quite interesting. He found out that I'd read a few things myself, too."

"The night after the theater came Mr. Keith again with the word that Kenneth had sprained his ankle practicing, and was in the depths of woe, not because he couldn't come to see me—oh, no!—but because he might have to miss playing in the game Saturday. That was the night Mr. Keith brought me the copy of 'Peer Gynt' from his Ibsen set. A few evenings later he came up on purpose to tell me just where Ken wanted me to sit on the grand stand Saturday, so that I could see him best. The ankle was coming all right, it seemed, but I didn't get one word direct from Ken, and I couldn't help wondering how I felt about it when Mr. Keith delivered his verbal message."

"Yes, I went to the football game. It was the third one of my life. There were girls all around me, screaming, 'Go it Ken! Go it! Go it! Go it!' just as if he were an animal, and he looked enough like some queer animal, too! Those awful togs! Why, from the minute he trotted into the field with that noseguard on I could have gone through the floor!"

"But the girls went on shrieking and jumping up and down, and the terrible mixed-up game went on, until at last, without a bit of warning, they turned and pounced on me, and told me how proud I was because Ken's magnificent playing had won that game! Then they rushed me down to the gate and just as we got there, Kenneth was carried out on the shoulders of four boys."

"Such a fright! His hair was wild; there was mud plastered all over his forehead and one cheek and blood running down the other cheek. But he looked supremely happy, and when our eyes met the triumphant, complacent glance he gave said, as plain as words, 'Aren't you glad you got me, though!'"

"I came straight home and wrote a letter breaking our engagement. He probably won't open it until after he sees how the Thanksgiving game comes out, but it's off my mind, and I've felt better ever since it was posted."

"What's that? No, I don't think my heart is broken. I don't know why. I was very fond of Ken until football came between us, but you see he would be liable to these attacks every autumn. Oscar Keith! Nonsense, Uncle Seymour!"—Chicago Daily News.
